1.3 Good Examples of Communication:

- (a) Napoleon Bonaparte: He escaped from prison and entered France again to rule. He who gave 11 principles of war and they hold good after 200 years, only one could be added because of computer-cum-Internet.
- (b) Julius Caesar: Friends, Romans, my countrymen, lend me your ears; I have not come to praise Caesar, I have come to bury him. He was a ----
- (c) Dialogue between Porus and Alexander: before crossing Jhelum River and came to negotiate in person, instead of sending his Ambassador.
- (d) Charming Kashi: Whole India in 2014-Feb-May- "Achchhe din aayen ge".
- 2. Definitions and Meaning: Nothing can be defined in one line and in due course you shall be framing definitions:
- 2.1 "Any interchange of ideas, information, feelings and emotions among two or more persons is called Communication". The effective means that the reiver has not only understood the message but also accepted and implied.
- 2.2 Communication is the interchange of thought of information to bring about mutual understanding and confidence or good human relations. In Communication receiver to understand the message and feelings contained in it, in the same sense/manner as the sender intended. Therefore, Communication should include transference and the understanding of meaning. In a group Communication, there four ingredients:
  - (a) As a control: the behaviour of members is displayed in many ways (And we apply SDDB at times).
  - (b) Fosters motivation: By clarifying what to do and how well?
  - (c) Emotion/ Feelings: Releasing the emotional impulses.
  - (d) Provides information: Group needs a decision by transmitting the data to identify and evaluate alternative choices.

3. Communication Process:

3.1 Communication can be thought of, as a process or flow. It involves at least two persons- a sender and receiver(s). Hence, it involves a process.

3.2 Ingredients/ Components of Communication:

- (a) Sender: Sender is the one, who initiates the communication process and also known as the source.
- (b) Encoding: Converting a Communication message to symbolic forms or in the language to understand.
- (c) Message: What is communicated/ transmitted?
- (d) Channel: The medium thru' which a communication Message travels; formal or informal.
- (e) Decoding: Translation of sender's message or Communication.
- (f) Receiver: In a dyadic, or two-person, communication situation, the receiver is the other person involved. Hence, receiver is the one, who receives the communication.
- (g) Feedback: The final link in the Communication process puts the message back into system as a check against misunderstanding or a rearward information loop.

4. Communication Channels / Basic Fundaments:

4.1 The formal Communication channels are provided by organizational structures (06). It also flows thru' informal channels. Generally, formal Communications are vertical (downwards/upwards), horizontal or diagonal.

4.3 Communication Channels:

4.2 Communication Channels:

5. Communication Media:

6. Communication Network:

- 6.1 Communication Network, channeled by which information flows:
  - (a) Formal Network: Task related communication that flows along the chain of authority.
  - (b) Informal Network: This communication is called grapevine:
    - (i) It is controlled by mgt.
    - (ii) Perceived by most employees-as more reliable than formal communication network.
  - (c) Whistle blowing: Not a part of syllabus (It was harmful but now mgt is using it in the positive way).

Communication Network
Passion	Self collection	Thru' Multiple paths	Miscellaneous:
			May call cycle, line, Y and so on, but basic are only three.
Chain-	Wheel-	All channel-	We may say like
Conduction	convection	Radiation	solid, liquid & gas
(Model-1.5)

- 7. Barriers of Communication: Barriers between the sender and the receiver are due to variety of distortion. The basic barriers are; Psychological, Physical and Semantic barriers. However, major factors, which act as barriers are:
  - (a) Perceptual Differences: Main cause of conflict and misunderstanding.
  - (b) Semantic Barrier: We hear what we expect/wish to hear (In TN state).
  - (c) Different Meanings: (Because of culture or regional or religious reasons, like Dividend or interest=sood).
  - (d) Motivation and Interest: Receiver should have interest or talk is motivating one.
  - (e) Perfunctory Attitude: Marginal/ superficial attention.
  - (f) Source's Creditability: Creditability is evaluated (Share may fall if FM makes negative statement).
  - (g) Filtering: Register only relevant matter and separate th irrelevant information.
  - (h) Hidden Agenda: One tries to hide intention behind, it is a tactful and diplomatic. (Not recommended and we will cover under TA).

10. Summary:

10.1 In the modern society or place of work, there is a communication problem. When communication is considered, it is felt that it can flow information in a linear manner, whereas; it is not. Rather, it is a dynamic, interpersonal process that involves behavioural aspects. MIS, ICT and kinesthetic also matter a lot. Even Internet has played a vital role in communication, but upward, downward, diagonal and horizontal communication will play unique role and one can learn in due course. It is recommended that all practical exercises are attained and practiced at your leisure time in a group, to attain perfection.

10.2 7Cs: We should also remember 7Cs of Communication (Content, Context, Clarity, Channel, Capability, Creditability and with correctness Continuity).
